Course Outline

The Course

THIS COURSE HAS BEEN POSTPONED

Statistics is the art and science of summarising data. Statistics play an essential role in all stages of clinical research from design through to analysis and interpretation.

Clinical Trials generate large volumes of data but most of us are looking for the “punch-line”; Did the new treatment work? Were the two groups being compared the same or different? We rely on statistics to help us design the most appropriate trial to answer our questions, to determine the required sample size and to interpret the results. A poorly designed study wastes time, resources and puts patients at unnecessary risk. A solid understanding of statistical principals is important for all team members, not just the team statistician; however for many of us statistics is nearly a foreign language.

This course is aimed at non-statisticians who work in clinical research and provides an introduction to the statistical methods used for the design, conduct and analysis of clinical trials. The course emphasises the application of statistical concepts to clinical research; aiming to demystify the subject and equipping delegates with the knowledge to read, understand, interpret and communicate data & statistics.

This is an introductory course and no significant mathematical knowledge is required.

Delegates should bring a laptop and calculator to the course.

Learning Objectives

- Define statistical terminology
- Read the statistical parts of a medical journal paper
- Describe the various types of data and how they are summarised
- Outline the process for statistical analysis of clinical trials

Describing Data

- Types of data, types of endpoints
- How are data described and presented
- Important issues relating to graphs, table, diagrams etc.
- Comparing two groups (means, odds ratios, hazard rates/ratio, Kaplan-Meier)

Significance Testing

- What is being evaluated
- Null and alternative hypothesis
- Types of error - P-values and confidence intervals
- Types of test

Power and Sample Size

- What is power?
- Power and sample size
- Determinants of sample size
- Designing clinical trials from statistical perspective
- Statistical sections of protocols

Statistical Reports

- Populations (ITT, per protocol)
- Safety and efficacy presentation
- Describing and understanding statistical significance

Who would benefit

All those working in clinical research, who would like to have a better understanding of statistics.

Course Fees

Guest	£550.00

David Morgan

David joined the pharmaceutical industry in 1986. He has led both statistics and data management groups in UK and US and spent 9 years in the CRO sector. David joined Ipsen in 2007 as Senior Director of Clinical Development Data Sciences, with global responsibility for data and statistical aspects of clinical development and successful regulatory submissions to FDA and EMA. From 2012 to 2015 he took up a new role as VP / Chief Statistical Scientist for Ipsen – supporting the Chief Medical Officer in ensuring patient safety and data integrity throughout the company. In this role he led Ipsen's initiative on Data Transparency.

By Car: Join the A404 either via at J5 of the M40, or J8/9 of the M4. Follow the A404 until you reach J9A signposted to Maidenhead/Reading. Turn right at the first roundabout, then continue on that road, going straight across any subsequent roundabouts. Take the second right past the airfield. If you reach the village, you've gone too far.

Once inside Grove Park, turn left at the first mini roundabout, then right at the T junction. Turn right at the red brick building, and we are in the one furthest from the road. Park in the large car park on your right. Please contact the Secretariat using the buzzer by the door - type in 12 and then press the small bell.

By Train: The nearest station is Maidenhead, located on the Paddington - Reading line. We recommend getting a taxi from the station, as bus routes are sporadic. It should take roughly 15 minutes.
